The following "reminiscence" of Hatchie river navigation is given place to, although it makes this chronicler "take water" a second time, when "Dean's best" would have been cheaper: MEMPHIS, TENN., March S, 1879.

BIVER EDITOR APPEAL—In article of the sixth instant your reporter backed down from two of his positions, and will now have to back down from a third. In relation to the bartender and bar supplies on board at the time, all Hatchle citizens well know how far a quart bottle of whisky would go in those days, and I can convince him by one single order I had to fill on one of my last trips of the season. One of my patrons requested me to bring up his summer supplies. Before saying anything further I wrote his name in my order book, Jim W——, and under it "one barrel whisky" while he was getting out his money. I then asked him what he wanted. His reply was, one "borrel" whisky; and his neighbor wanted some, but if this was the last trip he would have none to "spar," and to bring a "borrel" up for him. I then asked what I should buy with the balance of the money. He said he and the old woman had been taking about sugarand coffee, which she would like to have for Sundays and quarterly meeting, but as for himself he did not care a dror the stuff, but as there would be some change left, but not enough for another "borrel," I might put the balance in a "king," as he was informed that Dean's best was then sailing at sixteen cents per gallon, and he wanted nothing better. On fine same trip I must give you another order from a bereaved party who had just met with a sever loss in the death of his wife. He wanted two black callco mourning dresses for his daughters, and one barrel good whisky for self. Now, Mr. Reported, don't you know tha no same man who ever expected to get any patronage in the trade, would start on that long trip, or any trip at all, with only one quart bottle. The idea is absurd. You may say what you please about the quality, but you have greevly underrated the quantity. If the above proof is not conclusive, you can throw this in the waste basket and we will say nothing more about it.

RALPH WORMELEY. MEMPHIS, TENN., March 8, 1879.

This May be of Interest to Murines in these Parts. NEW YORK, February 19, 187%.

Editor of the Journal of Commerce:

First—Can you inform me who are manufacturers of steam callopes? There was one, I think, at the centennial exhibition in Philadelphia.

Second—What kind or nature of ciaims or bills against a steamboat can the boat be libeled for?

Third—How long after the claim or bill has been contracted has the party holding said claim or bill got in which to libel the boat? In other words, is there not a limit to the time in which a claimant has the right to libel a boat for his claim?

Fourth—I charter my boat to a party for a specified time, he agreeing to pay all bills of coal, labor, repairs, whatfage, grub, etc. Can I not protect myself and my boat against the payment of such claims (fearing he should default), by advertising that neither myself nor my boat are to be held liable or responsible for such claims curing asid period of charter? If so, how much publicly does the law require me to give in order to exempt myself and boat from the payment of such claims?

Reply.—First—The Hayden company, Haydenville, NEW YORK, February 19, 1879. Reply.-First-The Hayden company, Hayden

Reply.—First—The Hayden company, Haydenville, Massachusetts (office 84 Beekman street, New York), make the steam-whistle chimes, which is the article generally known as steam calliones.

Second—The general maritime law gives a lien on vessels, not in their home port, for whatever suitable supplies may be furnished them. The source of the above inquiry, however, indicates that particulars are wanted especially with regard to lien on vessels in their home ports. This is created by State laws, and the New York law gives such a lien for work or materials in building, repairing, furnishing or equipping; for fit and proper stores, furnished within this state; for wharfage or other port charges, including the wages of persons employed to watch; on account of loading or unloading, and advances for necessaries, or to procure insurance. In all the above cases the debt must amount to fify dollars on a sea-going vessel, or fifteen dollars on any other. A debt of twenty-five dollars will give a lien on account of towing or piloting, or insurance on vessel or freight.

Third—Such a debt ceases to be a lien on the vessel at the expiration of six months efter the debt is contracted, unless when the six months expire the vessel is absent from the port, in which case the lien continues for ten days after her next return; and in all cases, the lien ceases after the vessel has left port, unless within twelve days after her departure a lien is filed with the county clerk.

Fourth—The owner cannot protect himself against a lien in the manner described, as the law expressly gives it, whether the debt is contracted by the master or owner, or the charterer, builder or consignee, or the gent of either of them. The owner must r the agent of either of them. The owner must rotect himself, either by refusing to charter his essel to a doubtful customer or requiring security o indemnify himseif.

Liens on foreign ve sels are not barred in a specified period as in the above cases, but they must be inforced within a "reasonable time," to be determined in each case by the court.

in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak or sickly hair, to which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its operations, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft luster and richness of tone it imparts. It contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and kyeps it fresh and vigorous. FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.
